					Mumbai since January, 2012. Of the 1,612 public schools in Mumbai that cater to over 600,000 children, almost none have teachers trained to build social and emotional skills in their students. This becomes an area of huge concern given that children from low-income communities in Mumbai (and across the country) often face different forms of abuse and violence in their social environment making them vulnerable to adopting negative attitudes & behavior. These include low self-esteem, aggression and so on. According to the Indian Journal of Psychiatry “there is a need to improve the psychosocial competence and resilience of children. However, resource and trained persons in the field are few.” Considering this issue Amrita, a trained teacher and counsellor who has worked with Akanksha Foundation and Aasra Home for boys; Anukriti, a chemical engineer with two years work experience with Reliance Industries, and Swetha, a computer engineer who worked with Godrej Infotech and an NGO Pratham, who first met in 2011, decided to do something about it. After due deliberations, they decided to set up a social venture called ‘Apni Shala’ with a purpose to fill this infrastructural and resource gap in the education system. The three become good friends and shared passion for the education sector. They piloted many different ideas on the ground to before coming to the decision of doing something concrete. The cause of social and emotional learning was something that was always close to their hearts owing to their experience teaching children from disadvantaged communities. Their research and pilot experience eventually got them to realize the relevance of a focused effort in this direction, which led to conceptualization of Apni Shala. Apni Shala designs and delivers an engaging and educational life skills programme that schools across India can offer students. It also desires to build capacity in organisations that serve children from low-income communities, to include a positive mental health programme as part of their core school offering. By doing so, schools will significantly widen the scope of the education they provide, to include social and emotional learning for all children. Apni Shala’s model is centred on strong partnerships with government schools, affordable private schools and education non-profits. Their approach is to ‘deliver then train’ and thereby change the status quo by enabling these institutions to, develop the social and emotional skills of the children they serve, and independently run a positive mental health programme without much external help. The idea is to create a light weight and replicable programme that can be easily adopted by schools. It is also made fun and engaging for children by blending together interesting mediums

Sr. No	Name of School	Name of Programme	Duration	PIT Type	Format
					such as drama, games, stories, films and art, at the same time addressing specific social and emotional learning objectives. At the core of Apni Shala's programme design, lies the World Health Organisation's recommended framework for developing social and emotional skills in children. Self-esteem, empathy, teamwork, decision-making and critical-thinking are some of the important skills focused on. The programme is designed with the help of experts and educationists and is constantly improvised based on field experiences. They also have monitoring and evaluation system to track outcomes and work on improvements. Currently Apni Shala works in partnership with Doorstep School, Rotary Club of Bombay Worli, CHIP Mumbai, S R Foundation, and West Ward (Govandi Station Upper Primary School No. 1). The first thing that Apni Shala has achieved is providing access to social and emotional learning. The organization currently works with 300 children through their flagship programme and will double the outreach the coming year. While 80% of the 300 children show improved awareness of concepts such as 'cooperation', 'empathy' and 'communication', this awareness has also translated into better classroom behavior across almost all their current centres of operation. "I love how relevant the discussions are to children's lives. The pedagogy you use gets our children up and about in class and also sharing about experiences in their life outside school. Our teachers are learning too and have started using your methods in their classrooms! The children have also started expressing themselves more during class," said Rekha tai, Programme Coordinator, Doorstep School. With more teachers and organisations noticing how social and emotional development can be facilitated within classrooms through simple games, art and drama methods, Apni Shala believes its impact will only grow in the coming years. The Organization is supported by many incubators and funders such as UnLtd India, Atma, TAG Vinnatti, and DBS-TISS Social Entrepreneurship Programme. It has also won awards like Edupreneur Quest 2013, and Deshpande Foundation Social Entrepreneurship Challenge 2014. Consider you are the fourth member of the founding team of Apni Shala, answer the following questions. Your answer should be clear and precise. Please answer the questions in the same sequence and use fresh page for a new question. In case your team finds that you are not able to solve a problem, what would do you next? How do you feel working with a team of unknown people whom you know only for one or two years? Do you think you should take so much of risk? Why or why not? Do you feel you need to make a long term plan first before associating with this initiative? What if your luck does not favour you?

(20 Marks) The Integration of patients' perspectives in health research Health research is conducted to produce knowledge that may ultimately lead to better lives for patients. Research can be focused on disease mechanisms, (better) treatment options, prevention, increasing the quality of life for patients suffering from (the treatment of) the disease, or a combination of these aspects. Traditionally, researchers have collaborated mainly amongst each other and with clinicians to solve the puzzles in health research. Choices in the scientific research process were entirely in the hands of professionals and research funds, while patients, the 'endusers' of this research, were not systematically consulted.

					Over the last couple of decades the idea has come up that involving patients in the knowledge production process may enhance the practical relevance and quality of medical knowledge. The experiential knowledge of patients can complement scientific knowledge of experts. Additionally, it has been argued that patients have the right to become involved because they will be affected by the outcomes of health research. Last, patient involvement can lead to a better acceptance of research and its outcomes by patients, smoothing the implementation process. Patient participation, as this new movement in health research has been dubbed, can theoretically take place at any stage of the research cycle; during the planning phase of research projects (agenda setting), when writing and assessing research proposals to be funded, during research, and at the evaluation, dissemination and implementation phase. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Do you think patient participation is of great value in health research? Please explain. 2. Give an example of a research topic where patient participation can be included. Specify the role of the patients. 3. How can patient participation contribute to knowledge production in the field of mental health? 4. In which phase of research do you think it is most effective to involve patients? Please explain
