THE UNIVERSITY OF MADRAS

The first ever demand for higher education in the Madras Presidency was voiced forth in a public address to the Right Honourable Lord John Elphinstone G.C.H., Governor of Madras signed by 70,000 native inhabitants when the Governor in Council was contemplating “some effective and liberal measures for the establishment of an improved system of national education.” The public petition which was presented by the then Advocate General, Mr. George Norton on 11.11.1839 underlined the need for an English college in the city of Madras. Following this, Lord Elphinstone evolved a plan for the establishment of a Central Collegiate Institution or an ‘University’. This University had twin Departments (1) High School for the cultivation of English literature, regional language, philosophy and science, (2) College for providing instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science.

The University Board was constituted in January 1840 with Mr. George Norton as its President. This was the precursor of the present Presidency College, Chennai. However, a systematic educational policy for India was formulated only after 14 years by the historic dispatch of 1854 (Sir Charles Wood's Education Dispatch), which pointed out the rationale for “Creating a properly articulated system of education from the primary school to the University”. The Dispatch recommended the establishment in the Universities of Professorships “For the purposes of the delivery of lectures in various branches of learning including vernacular as well as classical languages”. As a sequel, the University of Madras, organized on the model of London University, was incorporated on 5th September 1857 by an Act of the Legislative Council of India.

As such, the University of Madras is one of the three post Universities of modern and has been serving the cause of higher education in India since its inception. It is now the mother and grandmother of various universities of South India.
